

The Positive Youth Development Lab is Seeking PSYCH 2950 Research Assistants for Fall 2018

Lab Director: Dr. Jordan Booker

This lab studies the ways emotional skills, personal character, and identity develop, the factors that contribute to these areas of development, and the ways these items are tied to well-being.

The lab is currently focused on working with recently collected data from child and adult samples to deeply analyze autobiographical life stories participants have provided. These are stories rich with emotions, topics informed by personality and identity, and aspects of positive life meaning.

We are seeking students able to contribute to 1 or 2 credit hours' worth of effort (3-6 hours each week, respectively) for the semester.

If you are interested in these kinds of topics and would like to learn more about the lab and its goals for the semester, please feel free to email Dr. Booker at bookerja@missouri.edu.
